For years the Yemen government has been in a constant war against the Houthi rebels. Given that Yemen is a poor country, Iran has been supplying the rebels with weapons to aid in the fight. Meanwhile, the people of Yemen are caught in the cross-fire. Countries present in the DISEC council shared their thoughts on the conflict while providing possible solutions. Delegates from Yemen, Vietnam, and Russia wanted to solve the conflict by demanding Iran to cease weapon supplies to Yemen and end foreign involvement.

Countries like Peru think removing people from the war first and providing a solution to the problem afterward would be the best option. While some countries provided peaceful alternatives, others insisted on using military action to solve the problem. This solution was heavily criticized as delegates constantly mention that the people of Yemen are affected by this conflict. Overall, the delegates of this council are making efforts to end the fight and restore sovereignty.
